#HEALTH: Is your job affecting your mental health?

By Hana Muzaffar - November 09, 2023 @ 12:23am

We spend a significant portion of our lives working. It's no surprise then that the workplace has a strong influence on our mental health or wellbeing. A toxic work environment can lead to a variety of mental health conditions while a supportive and nurturing setting results in increased employee satisfaction, better performance and ultimately, contributes to the success of an organisation.

These issues were highlighted recently at the Mental Health Experiential Conference (MHEC) 2.0 themed "Psychological Health for Employers and Leaders" organised by Emerging Journey Asia.

Mental health is intertwined into all aspects of life and mental wellbeing is profoundly impacted by the place where we spend a significant portion of our time, which is the workplace, says Parliamentary Special Select Committee (PSSC) on health chairman Datuk Seri Dr Ozulkefy Ahmad, who officiated the opening ceremony of the conference.

"Healthy and happy employees are not only more productive, but also more engaged and creative," he says.
